The official seal has been used since 1792. It was designed by Robert Scot, an officer in the U.S. Navy. In 1873, the seal was modified by a committee of five members of the United States Senate—Senators Morgan, Edmunds, Irwin, Mason, and Trumbull. The final version was approved by the Congress on April 24, 1876. The seal consists of a shield surrounded by an olive branch. The shield depicts a military flag with thirteen red and white horizontal stripes and a red oval center stripe. The white parts of the olive branch are on a white field. On the shield are the words, E PLURIBUS UNUM. ("Out of many, one") History The original Seal of the President was first used by George Washington during the term of 1789–1797. It was redrawn twice by a committee of eight in 1876, but the flag remained unchanged. This seal was used on all official documents, including his Annual Messages, until 1917. President Franklin Pierce retained the original seal until 1863, when Congress requested new designs be made for each of the Executive departments. The first ten Administrations each received modified seals, but the seal used during the administrations of William H. Harrison, Rutherford B. Hayes, James A. Garfield, Chester A. Arthur, Grover Cleveland, Benjamin Harrison, William McKinley, and William Howard Taft was identical to that of the seventeenth president. The seal was revised again in 1918, 1938, 1976, and 1993. The latest revision of the seal was used by George W. Bush, his successor Barack Obama, and Donald Trump. All three use the same seal in the colors of the old seal but with the text changed to "E Pluribus Unum" ("Out of many, one"). In July 2016, a new seal was designed by Scott Mactan Wood, a New York
